

GPS-4000A Product Discontinuance

Ref. No. 2011-103M

Pub Date 03/2013

Rockwell Collins offers the GPS-4000S Global Positioning System Sensor as a replacement for the GPS-4000A which has been discontinued.

Due to demand for technology replacement and obsolescence of key hardware components, the production of the GPS-4000A Global Positioning System Sensor has been discontinued. Rockwell Collins will continue to provide repair services for the product, but due to some parts being obsolete, we cannot guarantee that all failed units will be repairable. In the event that a failed unit is no longer repairable, Rockwell Collins can assist operators with the location of a suitable used replacement or purchase of a new replacement product.

If you own a GPS-4000A, there is a replacement available today. The GPS-4000S (822-2189-002/003) receivers are interchangeable with existing GPS-4000A hardware. An FAA letter of One-Way Equivalency is in place to approve the GPS-4000S as a direct replacement for the GPS-4000A in existing installations. The GPS-4000S can be installed via STC (SA01434WI-D).

Orders for the GPS-4000A must be placed by August 31, 2012, with deliveries requested by December 28, 2012. All repairs on the GPS-4000A are being done on a parts available basis. Orders for the GPS-4000S series will be accepted immediately.

We believe these actions will minimize any disruption to your aircraft operation. For further information on the Rockwell Collins GPS-4000S or assistance in planning your aircraft upgrade requirements, including spares and certification, please contact your Rockwell Collins Regional Sales Manager or Customer Account Administrator.
